Kilili to DHS: Increase CW caps

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Delegate Gregorio Kilili C. Sablan (Ind-MP) is asking Homeland Security Secretary Kirstjen Nielsen to put CW caps back at the 13,000 level to avoid disruption of the Marianas economy and the loss of U.S. jobs.

In a letter to Nielsen this week, Sablan called for a cap of 12,997 for fiscal year 2018 and 12,996 for fiscal year 2019, the same “cut by one” the delegate has previously urged.

Sablan

Homeland Security has announced limits of 9,998 and 4,999 for those two years, but also left open the possibility of change.

China protests Australia criticism of Chinese aid in the Pacific region

CANBERRA, Australia (AP)—China has protested an Australian minister's criticisms that Chinese aid programs in poor Pacific island countries were creating “white elephants” that threatened economic stability without delivering benefits.

Senator Concetta Fierravanti-Wells, minister for international development and the Pacific, told The Australian newspaper in an interview published on Wednesday that China was lending to Pacific nations on unfavorable terms to construct “useless build-

Reserve fund bill purposes 'too narrow'

By ERWIN ENCINARES
erwin_encinares@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Rep. Joseph Deleon Guerrero (R-Saipan) supports the idea of creating a "rainy day fund" for the Commonwealth, but says the language of the bill that would supposedly create one is too restrictive.

Deleon Guerrero said Tuesday the intention of House Bill 20-100 is something he supports but its language "is not entirely clear."

House Bill 20-100, offered by House Speaker Rafael Demapan (R-Saipan), would create a reserve fund for the Commonwealth in case an economic disaster occurs.

As outlined in the measure, 5 percent of taxes collected every year would be set aside in a reserve fund until fiscal year 2028. It says the collection will be used for economic development and diversification, infrastructure improvements, and medical healthcare facilities. The reserve fund would be handled by a Commonwealth Reserve Fund Investment Board.

Deleon Guerrero said that, upon reading the bill, it does not clarify how the board would utilize the funds for economic growth beyond 2028. A provision in the bill provided that the funds could be utilized prior to 2028 should the governor declare a state of emergency.

"How this funding is to be used for that intended purpose is not entirely clear," said Deleon Guerrero.

As for using the funds for infrastructure improvements, Deleon Guerrero pointed out that infrastructure improvements are needed now.

"Infrastructure improvements [are] an ongoing need. If roads get damaged, water lines leak, or new homesteads open up, there would be a need for infrastructure costs. By saying that we could only use it for that purpose [in 2028], what do we do about our needs prior to then if we have needs five years from now?" asked Deleon Guerrero.

"The same applies for medical and health facilities," he said, adding that the need for workforce training development is now.

He did stress that he does not question the intent of Demapan's bill; setting aside money for future austerity measures is something he supports, he said.

"I am just saying [this bill] should not be limited to [economic growth, infrastructure improvements, medical and health facility improvements,

Man sentenced to 5 years for possession of 'ice'

By BEA CABRERA
bea_cabrera@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

A man was sentenced to five years in prison last Wednesday in Superior Court for possession of methamphetamine or "ice."

Mariano Quitugua Falig Jr. was sentenced to five years imprisonment without the possibility of parole.

As a mitigating factor, Falig also relied on his "ice" addiction. However, the court made it clear in the sentencing order that he is not being punished because he is an addict but because he committed a crime of possessing a controlled substance.

In rendering the sentence, Associate Judge Joseph Camacho took note of the restraining order the victim sought against Falig in 2015.

In her application for a restraining order, she stated that Falig's ice use had increased and that he became more verbally and emotionally abusive. At one point, he even threatened to kill the victim and her unborn child. The baby passed away during birth.

Falig was given credit for time served since his arrest in June 2016 and eligible for parole after serving the first four years of his sentence.

Falig has prior criminal cases in the CNMI and Guam.

On June 8, 2016, Falig was on probation when he was arrested for illegal possession of a controlled substance and unlawful possession of ammunition. His probation in an assault case is set to expire on July 13, 2018.

On June 14, 2016, Falig was charged by the Attorney

General's Office with two counts of illegal possession of a controlled substance and one count of unlawful possession of ammunition.

The Attorney General's Office dismissed one count of illegal possession of a controlled substance on June 15, 2016.

On Sept. 6, 2016, the Attorney General's Office dismissed the charge of illegal possession of ammunition, leaving only one of the three original charges, which is illegal possession of controlled substance, the crime where the recent sentence was based on.

ings” and “roads to nowhere.”

“You’ve got the Pacific full of these useless buildings which nobody maintains, which are basically white elephants,” she told the newspaper.

Fierravanti-Wells later said sustaining debt was a significant threat to economic stability of countries in the Pacific.

“We work cooperatively with China and we encourage China to utilize its development assistance in a productive and effective manner,” she told Australian Broadcasting Corp.

“We just don’t want to build something for the heck of building it. We just don’t want to build a road that doesn’t go anywhere,” she added.

China’s Foreign Ministry spokesperson Lu Kang later said Fierravanti-Wells’ published comments “show scant regard for the facts and are nothing but irresponsible,” adding that China had made an official complaint to the Australian government.

“For a long time, on the basis of fully respecting the will of the Pacific island countries’ governments and people and taking into full account their development needs, China has offered a great deal of assistance to them,” Lu told reporters.

Chinese aid had “significantly fueled the economic and social development of these countries and delivered tangible benefits to the local people,” assistance that has been warmly welcomed by those countries, Lu said.

“We hope that certain people in Australia should engage in self-reflection instead of pointing fingers at and making irresponsible remarks about other countries,” Lu added.

The diplomatic row follows a Chinese protest last month at Prime Minister Malcolm Turnbull’s announcement that Australia will ban foreign interference in its politics—either through espionage or financial donations. The move was motivated largely by Russia’s alleged involvement in last year’s U.S. election and China’s growing influence on the global political landscape.

The Chinese foreign ministry said then that Turnbull’s remarks were prejudiced against China and had poisoned the atmosphere of China-Australia relations.

Australia’s opposition foreign affairs spokeswoman Penny Wong said on Wednesday that Fierravanti-Wells’ comments demonstrated the Australian government’s clumsy approach to foreign policy.

China is Australia’s largest trading partner, and the close bilateral relationship has affected Australia’s relations with the United States, its closest defense ally.

China transferred at least $1.8 billion in aid and loans to South Pacific countries in a decade through 2016, the Sydney-based Lowy Institute international policy think tank found.

Jonathan Pryke, director of the Lowy Institute’s Pacific islands program, said Fierravanti-Wells’ concerns about the terms of the Chinese loans were “quite legitimate.”

“One of the big problems about Chinese aid in the Pacific is that a lot of it comes in the form of loans and a lot of those loans, we don’t actually know what the conditions are,” Pryke said.

Pacific countries including Tonga, Vanuatu and Samoa were “already experiencing significant debt stress as a result of taking out these major loans,” he said.

“It does raise significant questions about: will China forgive these loans, what are the actual terms?” he added.

Fierravanti-Wells called on international development agencies including the World Bank and Asian Development Bank to increase their presence in the Pacific.

“The expansion of the World Bank and ADB’s loan book to the Pacific is very important because it will afford the opportunities for the banks to have visibility of the existing loan books of the countries and to assess the viability and the sustainability of repaying those loans,” she said.

Committee chair Rep. Angel A. Demapan (R-Saipan) said in an interview that the committee opted to defer the adoption of the bill until the comments of Department of Finance Secretary Larissa Larson are secured.

“...A lot of the members

[of the committee] were concerned about the possible fiscal impact of reserving 5 percent of revenues annually [until 2028]. We would also ask our fiscal analyst team in the Legislature to conduct a cost-benefit analysis on this proposal,” said Angel Demapan.

blood, we share blood and they do the same thing for us,” she said. “We don’t look at this as a competition with PHI [Pharmacy] either. We look at it as another choice for our patients. ...At the end of the day, when you are living in a remote island, you need to collaborate with your providers.”

Rep. Larry Deleon Guerrero (Ind-Saipan), who was present during the opening of the CHCC Pharmacy, enumerated three advantages: assist the hospital’s outpatients, give patients access to medicines before they leave the hospital, and provide patients access to low-cost medicines.

“Providing medications even before patients leave the hospital has a lot of advantages to it,” he said. “However way you look at it, it’s a positive move for our community hospital that is for the benefit for our community.”

“I heard there are quite a lot more that the hospital has in store for this year and I believe it is going to be a worthwhile endeavor,” he added.

Rep. Edwin K. Prost (Ind-Saipan) said the opening of the pharmacy will benefit the public.

services,” he said.

After more rounds of discussion, the committee decided to amend H.B. 20-100 to also allow the funds to be used for the continuation of government services in the event of an economic slump.

House Ways and Means focus only on the inpatient side, we also see that hospitals in the U.S. are also looking at running their own outpatient pharmacy. That is something that is part of the trend because they see how healthcare can be more effective that way,” Muña said.

She highlighted the testimony and role that Louise Concepcion played in having the opening of the pharmacy a reality.

“She heard our plan to bring better drug pricing and, one afternoon, she called, telling me that, despite of her illness, she wants to advocate for more affordable medication and speak publicly about how the costs of medication can be an obstacle to health.

“Ms. Concepcion is at peace now, but her story lives on, and we honor her today,” Muña added.

She was quick to belie the idea that CHCC Pharmacy will be competing with existing medical providers and pharmacies in the region and on island.

“This is not a competition but a collaboration. When you look at CHCC, we work with everyone. We work with Guam Medical Hospital as when they don’t have healthcare partner.”

“This pharmacy belongs to the people of the CNMI. It is part of an integrated health system that is focused on improving the health of the people of the CNMI. We at CHCC are proud of this opening and look forward to more improvements throughout the hospital and our health system,” she said.

Muña pointed out that CHCC does not merely focus on acute care, nor is it just about educating and promoting good health. “CHCC is a health system that must consider everything across the continuum of care,” she said.

Muña said the decision to re-open the Commonwealth Health Center’s only inpatient pharmacy department was made several years ago “in expectation of new regulations and to ease the daily struggle of those who rely on the health system.”

She said the CHCC Pharmacy intends to be “accessible, affordable,” and carry a wide selection of medicine and medical supply.

“Rather than have our navigation, canoe rides, cultural games, and arts and crafts.

The star of the show will be the Shanghai Sinma Acrobatic Troupe, a group of 27 gymnasts who have performed internationally.

The performances will be free to the public, with 400 seats reserved for select students and their chaperones on the first night, and for the man’amko the second night.

The party’s planning committee met at the Saipan Mayor’s Office yesterday to unveil the event and discuss the preparations made so far.

According to Saipan Mayor David M. Apatang, the Marianas Visitors Authority and Betty Bai of the Chinese community of Saipan are leading the preparations of the event, which is intended to rekindle the islands’ ancient ties to the moon and the night skies.

Apatang said the ancient Chamorros and Carolinians depended solely on the moon and stars to guide their way when crossing the trackless oceans and the goal for the Lunar New Year party is to bring that feeling back to the indigenous people while allowing tourists a shot at the experience. That explains why the event would also feature celestial navigation and canoe rides.

According to Lunar New

Year Party planning committee member Gordon Marciano, the event started off as a small discussion that later turned into a whole plan, thanks to the support of many.

There will also be a dog parade, in honor of the lunar year animal, the dog, which will have an open registration. All dog owners are invited to join the dog parade, dress their dogs in flashy outfits, and parade them on opening night. Registration for the dog parade is $5 and T Galleria will match every dollar raised from the parade for donation to the animal shelter of the Saipan Mayor’s Office to pay for the shelter’s necessities like food.

The dogs from the shelter will also join the parade and will be up for adoption during the event.

There will be canoes in the ocean during the two-day celebration. Tourists and residents will be able to go on either the Okeanos Marianas, Neni, the Richard Seaman, and many more.

The two-day Lunar New Year party will be held at the Garapan Fishing Base on Feb. 16-17, from 5pm to 10pm. The acrobats will also perform on Rota and Tinian on Feb. 15.

The public should expect a fusion of cultures, from the food to the performances, the arts, and even the games and activities.

The committee said it will be Micronesia’s largest multi-cultural Lunar New Year party and it will be open to the public.

The department made the sharp cuts, it said, because the Commonwealth-only transitional worker program is scheduled to end at the end of 2019.

“I let the Secretary know that Republicans and Democrats in the House and the Senate are already working together on legislation to go beyond 2019,” Sablan said.

“Our goals are to ensure that more and more local workers in the Marianas get jobs, but that foreign workers are still available to fill in the gaps.”

Sablan thinks it will be possible to negotiate a bill that has the bicameral and bipartisan support necessary for passage.

“I am working with the same group that got Public Law 115-53 enacted last year,” he said.

That Sablan legislation increased training funds for local workers, barred the use of CW permits for new construction workers, and—for the first time ever—increased the number of CW permits.

“In fact, we started discussions of this longer-term policy even before last year’s bill was signed into law.

“So, people are up to speed on the Marianas issues,” Sablan said. “And we have built the kind of familiarity and trust that helps any tough negotiation.”

In December 2014, Sablan also succeeded at getting the transition program extended for five years, from 2014 to 2019, with Public Law 113-235.

“We have been down this road before,” said Sablan. “But it would be foolish to predict success in Congress. There are 541 members of Congress, and anyone who really wanted to could block a bill.

“But we got the transition program extended before. We got Public Law 115-53 enacted last August.

“I think that experience makes success more possible.” (PR)

Camacho and Tarkong join NMI Judiciary

Chief Justice Alexandro C. Castro swore in two employees—Sonia A. Camacho and Jason T. Tarkong—last Monday, Jan. 8, at the NMI Supreme Court, making them the newest employees of the NMI Judiciary.

Camacho took her oath as director of Courts for the CNMI Judiciary, while Tarkong took his oath as chief marshal.

The oath-taking rites were held before Supreme Court justices, Superior Court judges, court managers, deputy marshals, and other law enforcement officers.

Castro thanked Gov. Ralph DLG Torres, Lt. Gov. Victor B. Hocog, Senate President Arnold Palacios and members of the Senate, and House Speaker Rafael Demapan and members of the House for providing the needed FTEs and funding for both positions.

“Because of your support,” Castro said, “the court is in a better position to deliver efficient and effective judicial services to the people of the Commonwealth. I also thank Sonia Camacho and Jason Tarkong for accepting their position as well as the challenges that lie ahead. I have no doubt that director Camacho and chief Tarkong will fulfill the responsibilities to the best of their abilities.”

Camacho has been with the CNMI Judiciary for over 20 years, initially appointed in 1995 by then-Presiding Judge Alexandro C. Castro to serve as a judicial assistant to then-associate judge Edward Manibusan. She has since served through four chief justices and three presiding judges in various capacities.

Prior to her recent appointment, Camacho was the special assistant to the presiding judge/deputy director of courts and assisted the chief justice as acting director of courts.

She has served in various management teams, supervised chamber assignments, facilitated court programs and projects, oversaw transitional and budgetary initiatives, and assisted with the development of case management strategies.

Camacho’s new role will involve the supervision of personnel with the CNMI Judiciary Administrative Office. She will be overseeing the Judiciary’s policy development and planning, court performance monitoring, and assisting with the implementation of the Judiciary’s strategic plan, Judicial Council initiatives, and justice programs.

Associate Judge Teresa Kim-Tenorio said after the proceeding, “It comes as no surprise that Ms. Camacho was appointed to lead the administration of the courts. Director Camacho is a capable leader with vast experience and institutional knowledge of the courts. What I appreciate most about director Camacho is her ability to foresee not just the proximate but the distal goals of the CNMI Judiciary and to implement the tough decisions. I look forward to continued progress in the Judiciary with her as our Director of Courts.”

Presiding Judge Roberto C. Naraja said about the appointment: “Ms. Sonia is definitely an asset to the CNMI Judiciary. I am proud of her appointment. She is the best qualified person for the job. She has the institutional knowledge. My colleagues and I wish her the best of luck and congratulate her on the new appointment. Her appointment as the director of Courts will definitely also be a benefit for the Superior Court.”

Tarkong joins the CNMI Judiciary after over 25 years in various law enforcement posts with the Commonwealth. Leaving his latest post as a police lieutenant with the Department of Public Safety, Tarkong brings to the Marshal Services Division his experience in investigative and police work and program management.

While at DPS, he had served as officer-in-charge of the Bike Patrol Unit and Sex Offender Registry, Crime Stoppers coordinator, certified firearms instructor, former range master and armorer, public information officer, and SWAT team leader.

Tarkong’s new role will involve the supervision of deputy marshals and handling all aspects of court security management, including safety and security protocols for members of the bench, court personnel, service providers, consumers, proceedings, and facilities. (PR)

Aspiring physician wins Soroptimist funding award

By BEA CABRERA
bea_cabrera@saipantribune.com
REPORTER

Ma. Vida Amor Eschaluse is this year's recipient of the "Live Your Dream" funding award given by the Soroptimist International of the Northern Marianas Islands.

She will be presented with the award at the "Live Your Dream" gala on Jan. 19, from 6pm to 9pm, at the Hibiscus Hall of the Fiesta Resort & Spa Saipan in Garapan.

According to Pam Brown, Soroptimist Ways and Means chair and former CNMI attorney general, the selection was tough because all nine candidates have stellar backgrounds and achievements but the 28-year-old aspiring physician stood out.

"Maria is an amazing young woman. She is the daughter of Filipino contract workers and she came to the CNMI with them. She was educated thoroughly here and in the Philippines," she said.

When Eschaluse returned to the CNMI, she got married, became a U.S. citizen, and had a daughter. Eschaluse then pursued a nursing major at the Northern Marianas College in 2016.

"In her third semester at NMC, she was chosen as a Build Exito Scholar, which is a research pathway program. She will be taking up a course called BS Health Sciences, which will prepare her to medical school," Brown said.

"Her education pathway is to pursue a doctorate in pathology, leaning toward cellular pathology. Her ultimate career goal is to become a pathologist, studying diseases at a cellular level," Brown added.

She said that Eschaluse met all Live Your Dream's criteria: head of household, financial need, educational goals, career goals, and references.

"Her grades are incredibly good, she got rave reviews from esteemed professors at NMC like Prof. Lisa A. Lunde and Dr. Beylul Solomon, and she is on her way to pursue a medical career, which is not an easy feat," she said.

The "Live Your Dream" program is considered a major event of the Soroptimist International of Americas. It makes sure that deserving young women who are the heads of the household can further their education by awarding them money that they can use for anything.

"It's not a scholarship as awardees don't have to use it for tuition or books. If they have to pay the rent or the babysitter, they can use it for what their need is. We don't restrict it," Brown said.

"We had our most ever nine applicants this year. Normally, we get four and we are happy. SINMI received good response to our call to apply. Saipan, Tinian, and Rota were all represented as there was incredible differences in nationalities—U.S. citizens, Chamorro, Korean, Filipino, Chinese, and Japanese descent," she added.

This is the fifth year of the "Live Your Dream" award given by Soroptimist International NMI and they plan to continue the program yearly.

"This is our way of giving back to the community because we all came from very divergent backgrounds. None of us took the straight path to whatever success we have now. We had to go through meandering journeys and people ended up helping us so we are paying it forward by helping this year's awardee," Brown said.

"We don't see it ending and, in fact, we just chartered a club on Palau in October. They're having their 'Live Your Dream' and this shows that we are a dynamic group. We extend our thanks to Bank of Guam as they have been instrumental to make this take off in the Micronesia region," she added.

Everyone is invited to join SINMI to celebrate the achievements and dreams of the 2018 "Live Your Dream" awardee. For tickets, call 234-9480.

Commerce says unemployment rate for US-eligible workers in NMI is at 7.5 percent

In response to several occurrences of inaccurate statistics regarding the actual number of U.S.-eligible workers who are defined as «unemployed," Secretary of Commerce Mark O. Rabauliman issued the following statement:

"As the CNMI government works toward mitigating the effects of the current labor crisis, it is important to the CNMI Department of Commerce and its Central Statistics Division, that dialogue in the community is well-informed with accurate data. Accordingly, with regard to the U.S.-eligible labor population in the CNMI, the recent [Office of Insular Affairs]-funded study, the 2016 Household Income Expenditure Survey, found that the estimated number of U.S. citizens and green card holders defined as "unemployed" represents about 7.5 percent of the current labor force, which also includes CW workers. For instance, according to the survey, there are approximately 1,800 [unemployed] U.S. citizens." (PR)

NMI Democrats adopt new party bylaws

The elected Central Executive Committee, the governing body of the Democratic Party of the Northern Mariana Islands Inc., adopted new party bylaws at their regular meeting last Jan. 6, 2017.

The new bylaws have been months in the making, according to party chair Daniel O. Quitugua, who said NMI Democrats "are now fully organized and getting the groundwork in place for the 2018 general election."

"With Donald Trump in the White House, it is critical that we have strong, capable, visionary, and trustworthy leadership at the local level. All over America, people are taking control of their communities," Quitugua said. "We intend to make sure the CNMI is no different."

"In fact," he added, "we believe we can be an example to the nation rather than a dishonored and neglected fifth cousin the family prefers to pretend isn't there."

"Our community is our society," Quitugua said, "and these values articulated by the national Democratic Party are local values."

In 2016 NMI Democrats became, for the first time, full participants in the national Democratic Party, holding a presidential caucus and attending the Democratic National Convention as equals with the 50 states, other territories and commonwealths. The NMI Democrats had representatives on the Platform Committee, the Rules Committee, and the Credentials Committee at the convention.

"Our delegates attained national prominence and received extensive press coverage, and our delegate to Congress was given floor time to address the entire convention," Quitugua said.

Present at the meeting and unanimously adopting the bylaws were Quitugua, secretary Jonathan Cabrera, treasurer Meling Chargualaf, Democratic National Committee member Nola Hix, Democratic National Committee member Michael A. White, and CEC members Stephen C. Woodruff, Joe Hill, Bobbie Iglesias, Aaron Murdock, Manassess Borja, John Furey, and Glenn Manglona. (PR)

College, career readiness alliance sets '18 priorities

Representatives of the Northern Marianas College and other members of the CNMI Research Alliance for College and Career Readiness and Success recently met to set priorities for 2018 that would help ensure that more CNMI students are ready to succeed as they graduate from high school.

"The discussions that we had at the recent meeting of the alliance was very productive," said NMC president Dr. Carmen Fernandez. "Key representatives [of] each of the alliance members were able to build on the tremendous progress we have already achieved in order to further advance student success in 2018."

The members of the alliance include NMC, the Public School System, and the CNMI Department of Labor.

Representatives of the CNMI Scholarship Office and the Saipan Higher Education Financial Assistance program also participated in the alliance meeting.

Fernandez said that NMC's partnership with PSS has already resulted in the launch of new programs that are aimed at helping high school students make a successful transition to college. These programs include the early admissions program, college placement tests being conducted at the high school level, and the strong alignment of curriculum between the two institutions.

"We continue to make important progress to help ensure that the CNMI ranks high in educational attainment when compared to other states," said Fernandez.

Two of the priorities identified at the recently-held meeting include co-designing English and math courses for 12th graders to help them be better prepared to pass credit-bearing college courses and learning more about and measuring students' social-emotional learning.

The objective of the alliance, which meets quarterly, is to strengthen the collaboration between K-12, college, and workforce sectors in the CNMI and continue to align their improvement efforts. The meeting discussions were informed by studies conducted by the Regional Education Laboratory of the Pacific, in collaboration with the alliance. REL Pacific's priority areas include college and career readiness and success, early childhood education and early reading, and professional learning for teachers.

REL Pacific's representatives—Dr. Phillip Herman, Dr. Daisy Carreon, and Juan Babauta from McREL International—facilitated the alliance meeting. Dr. Paul LeMahieu from the Carnegie Foundation for the Improvement of Teaching was a guest speaker. (PR)

FHB listed one of Top 10 banks in America

MAITE, Guam—Forbes magazine issued yesterday its annual America's 100 Largest Bank List and First Hawaiian Bank, Hawaii's largest bank, came in ranked at No. 9.

FHB is the only Hawaii bank that made it into the top 10 rank.

This is the first time FHB has been eligible to participate in this Forbes bank ranking since it became a public company following its initial public offering in August 2016.

"We are very proud to represent the state of Hawaii, Guam and Saipan as one of the top 10 banks in the country," said Bob Harrison, FHB chairman and chief executive officer. "Our performance is a testament to the hard work and dedication of our employees who make First Hawaiian the best bank for our customers."

Forbes ranks the 100 largest U.S. banks and thrifts based on 10 metrics that measure a bank's growth, profitability, capital adequacy and asset quality.

The list, which evaluates the strength of a bank, contains total assets, return on average tangible equity, return on average assets, net interest margin, efficiency ratio and net charge-offs as a percent of total loans. Guam woman sentenced for federal firearm, drug crimes

Shawn N. Anderson, U.S. Attorney for the Districts of Guam and the Northern Mariana Islands, said in a statement yesterday that Josephine Joann Quintanilla, 37, from Mangilao, was sentenced in the District Court of Guam to 46 months imprisonment for the crimes of drug user in possession of firearms and ammunition and possession with intent to distribute methamphetamine.

The Guam court also ordered three years of supervised release following Quintanilla's term of imprisonment, in addition to the forfeiture of seven firearms and 98 rounds of ammunition.

Also, defendants convicted of a federal drug offense may no longer qualify for certain federal benefits.

On May 31, 2017, Quintanilla pleaded guilty to two counts in an indictment charging her with drug user in possession of firearms and ammunition and possession with intent to distribute methamphetamine.

The investigation showed that Quintanilla was a regular user of methamphetamine hydrochloride throughout 2016.

A search of her home also revealed drug paraphernalia and scales used to weigh the drug.

During this same period, federal agents learned that Quintanilla possessed and sold firearms and ammunition.

Quintanilla also traveled to California to mail 28.24 grams of methamphetamine to Guam.

The investigation was conducted by the U.S. Postal Service Inspection and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives. The case was prosecuted by Rosetta San Nicolas, assistant U.S. attorney. (USAO)

Don't rip families apart and force hard-working Salvadorans to leave

President Trump's order that 200,000 Salvadoran refugees leave the United States by September 2019 after living here legally for nearly 20 years is mean-spirited in the extreme.

It will make America a weaker and literally a poorer nation: 95 percent of these residents have jobs, and many run their own small businesses, employing others. They are the opposite of a drain on the U.S. economy. In California, 50,000 would be ripped from the fabric of communities they thought were home.

And think of this: Most have U.S.-born children. Imagine the agony of having to choose between leaving them behind, as citizens, and taking them to a country whose national homicide rate is 17 times the global average. Competing gangs—the Barrio 18 and the Mara Salvatrucha (MS-13)—wage civil war daily on the streets. Peaceful residents often are the casualties.

The Salvadorans came to the United States in 2001 after the 7.7 earthquake that killed 944 people, destroyed more than 100,000 homes and left the majority of residents without clean water and basic sanitation.

It was a horror. But for different reasons today, El Salvador is still a horror. Homeland Security Secretary Kirstjen Nielsen's contention that conditions have improved significantly is either ignorant or dishonest.

Salvadorans aren't the only targets. Some 30,000 Haitians have been told to return to their desperately poor homeland. Honduran and Nicaraguan refugees also are in the crosshairs. This pleases Trump's base, since the refugees are people of color and came here with nothing.

But it's a sad day for what once were American values.

The designation of "Temporary Protected Status" for refugees, which is renewed every 18 months, implies that deportation is possible. But previous presidents understood that the potential to build a better life here is what makes the system work.

Imagine refugees' motivation to find work, stay out of trouble and improve their families' standing. That's why Salvadorans have an unemployment rate significantly lower than average. They are valuable construction workers, child care providers, gardeners and restaurant workers—or owners. Like most waves of immigrants, their children will be better educated and qualified for higher level jobs.

Now imagine refugees arriving here knowing that they could be shipped back any time. Why bother to become part of communities they'll only be forced to leave?

Accepting refugees has a substantial up-front cost. Most arrive not knowing the language or bringing personal wealth. They need help. But over time their hard work repays that American generosity.

A fruitful substitute for forbidden words

Washington's corps of video-pundits celebrated 2017's final daze by fixating on North Korea's nukes, Republicans' disarray and Democrats' discombobulation. Then they eased seamlessly into their 2018 obsession over President Donald Trump's "Fire and Fury," as told by his fired and furious.

But inside the traditionally cheerless chambers and cubicles of the federal bureaucracy, newly arrived TrumpWorld ideologues and their career-professional colleagues ended 2017 with a clash of cross words over banned words that never really received the insightful help only a certified pundit can provide. Until now. For I have not only seen this problem once before – but I remember how a senior official solved it by devising a creative workaround.

As controversies go, this Trump administration version is one that (to paraphrase poet Robert Frost), couldn't be called ungentle, but how thoroughly departmental – and governmental. We might never have known about this except it was revealed in a scoop by The Washington Post's Lena H. Sun and Juliet Eilperin.

At a budget meeting with senior officials in the Atlanta headquarters of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention last month, policy analysts were reportedly told by a senior official that they are now prohibited from using seven words and phrases in official documents and presentations: "vulnerable," "entitlement," diversity, transgender, "fetus," "evidence-based" and "science-based." The official was relaying instructions from higher-ups. CDC is overseen by the Department of Health and Human Services.

The guidance, as delivered to the policy analysts, reportedly included one suggested workaround. Instead of "evidence-based" or "science-based," the analysts were encouraged to say: "CDC bases its recommendations on science in consideration with community standards and wishes." Whatever that means.

The Post scoop quoted an unnamed longtime CDC analyst who said: "In my experience, we've never had any pushback from an ideological standpoint." The analyst said others in the room were "incredulous" at hearing about the Trump administration's forbidden words, adding: "It was very much, 'Are you serious? Are you kidding?'"

My reaction was a bit different: Where's Alfred Kahn when we really need him?

Actually, we know the answer. Kahn, a highly-respected economist and regulatory scholar, who was the architect of President Jimmy Carter's deregulation of the airline industry, died in 2010 at age 93. But to describe Kahn in just those terms – or even to say he also reluctantly agreed to serve as Carter's White House inflation czar, as head of the Council on Wage and Price Stability—is to miss the essence of this unique figure in resolving mundane matters of governance.

For Kahn became a superhero of those of us who had yearned in vain for straight-talk from an economist—a skill that was enhanced by the fact that he also possessed a world-class Groucho Marx moustache and a world-class talent for quick-draw quips. The combination somehow enabled him to be able to technically obey a presidential word-ban – while smashing it to de-facto smithereens, in a way that left even his outraged bosses laughing.

One day in 1978, Carter was said to have been furious that Kahn had publicly warned of the importance of preventing a "recession," Kahn was told to avoid using the term, lest he generate a climate leading to an economic downturn. So Kahn came up with a euphemism – instead of "recession" he using the word "banana." As in: "Between 1973 and 1975 we had the deepest banana that we had in 35 years, and yet inflation dipped only very briefly."

Soon Kahn encountered another presidential objection – the president of United Fruit Company chided him for denigrating bananas. So instead, Kahn started saying "kumquat."

With inflation topping 10 percent in 1979, Kahn, who had large problems and no staff, wanted to leave his job. At one point he famously joked: "I can't figure out why the president doesn't fire me." (He paused.) "Actually, I do know. Nobody would be foolish enough to take this job."

Which brings me back to the CDC. Predictably, after the Post's scoop appeared, the CDC's new director, Dr. Brenda Fitzgerald, faced a wave of criticism – from both inside and outside her agency. She did not refute the account of what policy analysts had been told at that meeting. But she quickly tweeted a denial that any such thing was now the CDC policy.

"I want to assure you there are no banned words at CDC," said the new director.

How do you like them pineapples?

Got splinters?

Many Saipan Tribune readers are part of the SOHO (small office and home office) world. I'm a long-time SOHO guy myself. As the new year rolled onto the calendar I was mid-stream in a project to custom-build some furnishings for my office. The big question was this: Can a total carpentry know-nothing produce functional SOHO furnishings?

I finally have the answer. It's "yes." Sick of your office? You can probably fix a lot of it yourself.

Let's make that a qualified "yes." My current SOHO is a get-your-work done sort of office, as opposed to a more polished meet-with-clients sort of space. Functionality, not professional polish, was my goal. I will, however, note that everything came together square, level, and tightly fit. I can deal with simple. I won't, however, suffer shabby.

It took three basic power tools (a circular saw, a cordless drill, and a jigsaw), along with various accouterments for measuring and marking, to get this done. And if I can do it, then anyone can.

I've taken two steps. The first was to build a four-tier console that covers an entire wall from top to bottom. It serves as a bookshelf, as a platform for a printer and stationary, and as a storage area for boxes of office supplies. The second step was to build a long, narrow table that runs along a wall.

The long table is supposed to provide a surface for arranging documents so I can do impressive things. Somehow, though, it got covered in my collection of Merle Haggard CDs.

Come to think of it, I haven't done anything remotely impressive since 1982. So I'm thinking that impressive can wait a little while longer. There's no need to defile a fresh new year by trying to force things.

Anyway, the next, and final, step will be to build a desk that will tie together the ensemble. That's a great word, "ensemble." It adds some class to my entirely classless operation.

I did my marking, sawing, and sanding in the garage. Then I carted everything over to my SOHO workspace where I screwed everything together using the cordless drill as a driver.

During the entire process I didn't encounter any big problems, but everything took a lot longer than I anticipated. This didn't bother me, since part of the reason I embarked on the project was to putter around at a slow pace and ignore the demands of the fast-paced world.

For example, when I assembled the first three parts of the wall console, it took me about an hour to set the pieces square before I fastened them together. Lacking any coherent methodology for this situation, I addressed it with my true specialty: blunt-headed trial-and-error.

And so I patched things together, took measurements, shook my head in dismay, took the pieces apart, then started all over again. I did this dozens of times. When, by pure dint of randomness, everything finally jibed, I held my breath and fastened the pieces together. Everything else went smoothly from that point on.

When I was in the cutting phase I marked the lumber to show where the factory cuts were. This was under the theory that they'd be more square than my cuts were. After all, a newbie with a circular saw ain't exactly going to give Pythagoras a run for his money. This extra degree of pessimism allowed me to strategically match things together during assembly to make the early fits as square as possible.

On the fastener note, before I got the project rolling, I did some experiments with scrap wood. The types of screws you'd use with a normal screwdriver (slotted- or Phillips-head) didn't work nearly as well as the star-headed ones ("Torx"). I also experimented to get a feel for how small my pieces of wood could be before they'd run the risk of getting split by the fasteners.

Having realized that fasteners were going to be an important part of the equation, I ultimately wound up spending more on screws than I did on my circular saw. As for the smaller pieces of wood, I drilled pilot holes in them before driving the fasteners and this prevented splitting.

Well, such are the highlights of the project. I encountered no pitfalls, no jokers, no bad surprises. In summary, this stuff is doable.

To my fellow SOHO operators who are contemplating improving their spaces, I say: Come on in, the water's fine.

Repeating failure

It wasn't long ago when the apparel industry here was shut down via the collective effort of the U.S. garment industry in search for an even playing field in competition. The industry pressed the U.S. Congress for it.

Unfairness includes: 1). Paying far less than the federal minimum wage then. 2). We don't pay federal taxes like stateside apparel companies do annually.

There was methodical paralysis implemented with the pull of the rug, known here as local control of immigration, that permanently shuttered the industry. Came the inclusion of China in the World Trade Organization that gave it an even shot at global competition. It's all about fair competition that took an action of the U.S. Congress to bring the NMI to its knees.

Now, take a critical look at the casino business here that is headed down the same path: 1). Doesn't pay federal taxes while those in the U.S. pay their share. 2). Casino income isn't taxed, unlike places like Macau that imposes a 39-percent tax on money rolling across the table. 3). Untaxed casino money in the billions is repatriated to China or elsewhere without a penny accruing to either the federal or local treasury.

Obviously, this anomaly doesn't grant the U.S. casino industry any room to maneuver so it keeps more of the income it generates. It's unfair to the industry across the sea, no matter how you dice, splice or slice it. Would U.S. casino industry firms keep silent at this woefully unfair level of competition? Wouldn't they bring this to the attention of their representatives in the U.S. Congress for some legal remedy?

Salvadorans are being discarded just at the time the American investment is paying off.

Instead, the U.S. should encourage refugees to apply for lawful permanent resident status after a period of years and, eventually, for citizenship. This would heighten rather than undercut the incentive to be valuable, law-abiding, productive, taxpaying residents.

This president won't go there. But an enlightened Congress could change the law.

The negative effect of this anomaly would adversely affect us when Congress uses its fine-toothed comb on all entitlement assistance, including the millions of dollars for basic infrastructure the NMI begs for annually. I wouldn't doubt they'd tighten the nook until this side of the Pacific responsibly imposes reasonable income tax on all pennies, nickels and dimes rolling across betting tables in downtown Garapan. Fiscal sufficiency is a major part of self-government, di ba?

Hush! Policymaking is an interesting fiduciary duty that extends beyond the chambers of the Legislature or administration building. I would be demonstrating how tailbones upstairs are hidden and hooked to tailgates of generous sugar daddies feeding our esteemed folks on the hill. It's what I call "unaccountability" where the elected elite decides issues without our participation.

Home: A stubborn issue that keeps popping up pertains to the first family home. Folks from all walks of life have worked long and hard to build what we all call "home." It's a place where children make lasting memories growing up until they establish their own elsewhere. Home is central to strengthening the family unit and our community.

It isn't the sentimental aspect of home that I find troubling as much as the ability of our people to pay for it throughout the duration of the loan that runs about 20-30 years. I remember the pain of being jobless and came close to losing the only family home I had in the mid-'80s. It was a devastating thought until I found job and resumed payment. It took a loss of another property to make up for it.

It raises valid questions, like how many of those who have taken home loans in recent past could actually make it through the duration? Have you taken out real estate or life insurance to cover such cost in the event of death so your family isn't instantly homeless? What are the chances of your holding on to your current job and have you checked your astrology if you'd be healthy for another 20 years?

That I have seen the depth of joblessness against the obligation to pay for the only family home forces this discussion so all may begin reviewing what lies ahead beyond mañana. Is there a better way to building a safe, secure and sanitary family home beyond humongous institutional loans?

Yes! With a little creativity and ingenuity we could raise the sail on our canoe for an all-day fishing trip in the deep blue, assured of coming home with tons of catch for everyone.

Friends, one can never forget the familiar sounds and sights of home, e.g., echo of the northern trade winds at a distance, the waves working up a storm in the Philippine Sea, the rainbow chasing dark clouds into the sunset; and melodic bird songs in marshland around Susupe Lake.

Sunshine: We come from the tropics where there's plenty of sun, sea, and sand. We frolic and fish in the water when we want to do so for fun and sustenance. There's plenty of sunshine!

At the same time we quiz if there's sufficient sunshine in the people we've elected to represent us up on the hill? How many are faithfully humming Silent Night all night?

You watch them as the party moves through the night. They lose the ability to speak with simple common sense as they load themselves with alcohol out of frustration. They finally had to be assisted as they wobble to their cars to head home, singing a garbled version of their Felis Navidat.

Inconsistency: The business community here wants a CW extension and is hopeful of its adoption by summer, a position riddled with contradiction.

The NMI has a 21-percent unemployment rate or 1,500 unemployed locals. So how does the business sector justify extension when it is also half the problem of unemployment here?

The redundant chorus reminds me of an adage by Mark Twain, "Everybody talks about the weather," he said, "but nobody does anything about it."

Understood the heavy expense involved in training locals plus the obligation that they are paid higher per federal minimum wage law over CWs. But then doing is known as assimilation, where the business community becomes a part of the local community. Or is this too difficult a concept?

Immigration agents descend on 7-Eleven stores in 17 states

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Seven immigration agents filed into a 7-Eleven store before dawn Wednesday, waited for people to go through the checkout line and told arriving customers and a driver delivering beer to wait outside. A federal inspection was underway, they said.

Within 20 minutes, they verified that the cashier had a valid green card and served notice on the owner to produce hiring records in three days that deal with employees' immigration status.

The well-rehearsed scene, executed with quiet efficiency in Los Angeles' Koreatown, played out at about 100 7-Eleven stores in 17 states and the District of Columbia, a rolling operation that officials called the largest immigration action against an employer under Donald Trump's presidency.

The employment audits and interviews with store workers could lead to criminal charges or fines. And they appeared to open a new front in Trump's expansion of immigration enforcement, which has already brought a 40 percent increase in deportation arrests and pledges to spend billions of dollars on a border wall with Mexico.

A top official at U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement said the audits were "the first of many" and

ICE arrests

ICE Enforcement and Removal Operation arrests from the start of the new administration to the end of FY2017 compared to the same timeframe in FY2016; the number of administrative arrests rose from 77,806 to 110,568, a 42 percent increase

"a harbinger of what's to come" for employers.

"This is what we're gearing up for this year and what you're going to see more and more of is these large-scale compliance inspections, just for starters," said Derek Benner, acting head of ICE's Homeland Security Investigations, which oversees cases against employers.

"It's not going to be limited to large companies or any particular industry—big, medium and small," he said.

After the inspections, officials plan to look at whether the cases warrant administrative action or criminal investigations, Benner told The Associated Press.

7-Eleven Stores Inc., based in Irving, Texas, said in a statement that the owners of its franchises are responsible for hiring and verifying work eligibility. The chain with more than 8,600 convenience stores in the U.S. said it has previously ended franchise agreements for owners convicted of breaking employment laws.

Unlike other enforcement efforts that have marked Trump's first year in office, Wednesday's actions were aimed squarely at store owners and managers, though 21 workers across the country were arrested on suspicion of being in the country illegally.

NYC halts $9.6M incentive package to move Aetna to city

NEW YORK (AP)—New York City is halting a $9.6 million incentive package offered to Aetna to move its headquarters to the city.

The insurance giant announced in June that it would move its headquarters to New York City beginning in late 2018 after nearly two centuries in Hartford, Connecticut. But those plans were put on hold after CVS Health Corp. said in December that it was buying Aetna for $69 billion in a deal that would help the drugstore chain reach deeper into customer health care and protect a key client.

At that time, Aetna said all of its locations would be evaluated as part of its integration with CVS. In a statement Wednesday night, the company said it didn't have anything else to add to that.

"We had a preliminary agreement that still needed formal approval, and we can't get that approval if they can't positively affirm to us that the relocation is happening," said Stephanie Baez, a spokeswoman for the New York City Economic Development Corp. "They can always come back to us once they've made the decision."

Aetna, the nation's third-largest health insurer, has a workforce of almost 50,000 and employs about 6,000 people in Connecticut. It traces its roots in Hartford to 1819.

Court rules in favor of Trump over fate of consumer watchdog

NEW YORK (AP)—A federal judge ruled late Wednesday in favor of President Donald Trump and the White House over the control of the national financial watchdog agency, the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau.

In a 46-page opinion, Judge Timothy Kelly denied Leland English, the deputy director of the CFPB, a preliminary injunction that would have stopped Mick Mulvaney, Trump's budget director, from taking on a second role as acting director of the agency.

The conflict arose late last month when Richard Cordray, named by President Barack Obama to lead the CFPB, stepped down and named English as his replacement. In response, the White House named Mulvaney as the replacement for Cordray.

This is the second time Kelly ruled against English, who sought an emergency restraining order against Mulvaney to keep him from taking over the agency. In that first ruling last month, Kelly, a Trump appointee who took the bench last year, expressed skepticism about whether English would prevail in her case.

"Because the court has determined that English is not likely to succeed on the merits, the balance of the equities would necessarily weigh against granting her an injunction," Kelly said in his opinion.

17 dead in CA mudslides, more than dozen missing

MONTECITO, Calif. (AP)—Anxious family members awaited word on loved ones Wednesday as rescue crews searched grimy debris and ruins for more than a dozen people missing after mudslides in Southern California destroyed an estimated 100 houses, swept cars to the beach and left at least 17 victims dead.

“It’s just waiting and not knowing, and the more I haven’t heard from them—we have to find them,” said Kelly Weimer, whose elderly parents’ home was wrecked by the torrent of mud, trees and boulders that flowed down a fire-scarred mountain and slammed into the coastal town of Montecito in Santa Barbara County early Tuesday.

The drenching storm that triggered the disaster gave way to sunny skies, as hundreds of searchers carefully combed a messy landscape strewn with hazards.

“We’ve gotten multiple reports of rescuers falling through manholes that were covered with mud, swimming pools that were covered up with mud,” said Anthony Buzzerio, a Los Angeles County fire battalion chief. “The mud is acting like a candy shell on ice cream. It’s crusty on top but soft underneath, so we’re having to be very careful.”

Search for victims continues after storm

More than a dozen people were killed Tuesday, at least 25 were injured and at least 50 had to be rescued by helicopters after a powerful mud flow swept away dozens of homes in Santa Barbara County.

Difference between a flow and a slide

Burned-over hillsides are especially susceptible to destructive mud flows because scorched earth doesn't absorb water well and the land is easily eroded when there are no shrubs.

Mud flow

At least 60 percent fine material, such as mud and clays

Landslide

A deep-seated slope failure, usually deeper than three to six feet — rare on fire-denuded slopes

Debris flow

A moving mass filled with larger material, such as boulders or tree trunks

Trump: 'Unlikely' he'd submit to a Russia probe interview

WASHINGTON (AP)— President Donald Trump says that it "seems unlikely" that he'd give an interview in special counsel Robert Mueller's investigation into potential coordination between Russia and the Trump campaign.

Trump said "we'll see what happens" when asked if he'd provide an interview to Mueller's team.

"When they have no collusion and nobody's found any collusion at any level, it seems unlikely that you'd even have an interview," Trump said Wednesday during a joint news conference with the prime minister of Norway.

The special counsel's team of investigators has expressed interest in speaking with Trump, but no details have been worked out. Trump's lawyers have previously stated their determination to cooperate with requests in the probe, which has already resulted in charges against four of Trump's campaign advisers.

Trump called the investigation a "phony cloud" over his administration.

"It has hurt our government," he said. "It was a Democrat hoax."

Trump's words differed from what he said at a news conference in June, shortly after fired FBI Director James Comey had told Congress that Trump asked him for a pledge of loyalty. Trump denied that, and said he'd be "100 percent" willing to tell his version of events under oath. He said he'd be "glad to" speak to Mueller about it.

The comments come after Trump had already lashed out at the investigations on Twitter Wednesday morning, urging Republicans to take control of the inquiries and repeating his claim that they are on a "witch hunt."

"There was no collusion, everybody including the Dems knows there was no collusion, & yet on and on it goes," he tweeted. "Russia & the world is laughing at the stupidity they are witnessing. Republicans should finally take control!"

In a separate tweet Wednesday morning, Trump accused Democratic Sen. Dianne Feinstein of being "underhanded and a disgrace" for disclosing details of a dossier of allegations about his ties to Russia during the presidential campaign.

A day earlier, Feinstein, who faces a primary challenge in her re-election this year, released the transcript of the Senate Judiciary Committee's closed-door August interview with an official from the political opposition research firm Fusion GPS, which commissioned the dossier. She released the transcript of Glenn Simpson's interview over the objections of the committee's Republican chairman, Iowa Sen. Chuck Grassley. She is the top Democrat on the panel.

"The fact that Sneaky Dianne Feinstein, who has on numerous occasions stated that collusion between Trump/Russia has not been found, would release testimony in such an underhanded and possibly illegal way, totally without authorization, is a disgrace," Trump tweeted. "Must have tough Primary!"

"It's just a bad day, not a bad life."

Myanmar: Soldiers, villagers killed Rohingya in mass grave

BANGKOK (AP)—Myanmar's military acknowledged Wednesday that its security forces and Buddhist villagers killed 10 Rohingya Muslims whose bodies were found in a mass grave in a village in troubled Rakhine state.

The public admission of wrongdoing is the military's first since it launched "clearance operations" against ethnic Rohingya in August, prompting more than 650,000 to flee into neighboring Bangladesh in what the United Nations has called "ethnic cleansing."

A statement on the military commander-in-chief's Facebook page said the Rohingya found in the mass grave had threatened Buddhist villagers and were killed in retaliation.

The U.N. and other groups accuse the military of widespread atrocities against Rohingya, including killings, rapes and the burning of homes. But the military has insisted that there has been no wrongdoing by any security forces.

The government of Buddhist-majority Myanmar has refused to accept Rohingya Muslims as a minority group, even though they have lived in the country for generations. They are widely called "Bengalis" and are accused of migrating illegally from Bangladesh.

Rohingya were stripped of their citizenship in 1982, denying them almost all rights and rendering them stateless.

The 10 bodies were found in December in a mass grave near a cemetery in Inn Din village.

"It is true that both the villagers and security forces admitted they killed the 10 Bengali terrorists," the military statement said. "The army will take charge of those who are responsible for the killings and who broke the rules of engagement. This incident happened because ethnic Buddhist villagers were threatened and provoked by the terrorists."

Pakistan reporter says he escaped kidnapping attempt

ISLAMABAD (AP)—When armed men tried to kidnap and threatened to kill him, Pakistani journalist Taha Siddiqui feared he would become another statistic in a growing list of activists and bloggers who have disappeared in Pakistan after criticizing the country's powerful military or advocating peace with hostile neighbor India. Siddiqui, the Pakistan bureau chief for the New Delhi-based online news agency World is One News, said he suspected the attack Wednesday was payback for his critical reporting on Pakistan's powerful military and intelligence agencies. Siddiqui was heading to the airport to catch a flight to London when his taxi was stopped. He was ordered out of the vehicle, beaten and threatened. He escaped, fleeing into oncoming traffic and flagging down a passing car. Behind him he said he heard the gunmen shout: "Shoot him! Shoot him!" "They wanted to make me a missing person," Siddiqui said in a telephone interview from a local police station where he went after the attack to file a complaint and demand police protection. "This has been coming. It's all about what I write."

Pakistan mob angered by rape, murder of girl attacks police

LAHORE, Pakistan (AP)—A mob angered over the recent rape and murder of an 8-year-old girl attacked a police station and a nearby government building in eastern Punjab province on Wednesday, triggering clashes that left at least two people dead and several injured, the police said. The violence erupted in the city of Kasur hours before the funeral of Zainab Ansari, whose case has drawn wide public outrage. The girl went missing last week while going to a nearby home for Quranic studies. Her parents, who were away at a pilgrimage in Saudi Arabia at the time, returned on Wednesday, landing at the Islamabad airport. "We will not bury our daughter until her killers are arrested," said the father, Ameen Ansari, as his wife sobbed. Zainab's body was found on Tuesday in a garbage bin, senior police officer Imran Nawaz Khan said. Police say she was abducted, raped and murdered. Officer Maqsood Ahmed said six girls were sexually assaulted in recent months in Kasur and that police were probing whether there was a connection in the cases. Activists on social media have condemned the government for failing to arrest those involved in the crime.

India airline fires 2 pilots after reported fight in cockpit

NEW DELHI (AP)—An Indian airline says it has fired two pilots who reportedly fought in the cockpit, with the man allegedly slapping the woman during the New Year's Day flight from London to Mumbai. Jet Airways says in a statement Tuesday that it "has terminated services of both the cockpit crew with immediate effect." The company has released no further details. Indian media have reported the male pilot slapped his female co-pilot during an argument in the cockpit, and that she emerged crying and for a time refused to return to the cockpit. The flight, which was carrying 324 passengers and 14 crew members, landed safely.

Russian gains in Syria threatened

MOSCOW (AP)—Just weeks after Russian President Vladimir Putin declared victory in Syria, Russian military outposts in the country have come under rebel attacks that are challenging Moscow's gains.

Russian bases located in Syrian President Bashar Assad's Alawite heartland had been immune to rebel raids ever since Moscow launched its campaign in Syria in September 2015. But a series of drone attacks and mortar and rocket shelling in recent days has broken the calm.

The incursions have raised doubts both about the sustainability of the Assad government's recent victories and Moscow's ability to protect its assets in the country.

A drone raid on Saturday was unusually massive, involving 13 of the aircraft equipped with satellite navigation and launched from a distance of up to 100 kilometers (60 miles) away, according to the Russian Defense Ministry. It said seven of the drones were shot down by air defense systems and the remaining six were forced to land.

While the ministry said the attack caused no damage to the Hemeimeem air base in the province of Latakia and the naval outpost in the Syrian port of Tartus, it marked the first time the militants used drones against Russian assets on such a large scale.

No one has claimed responsibility for the attacks.

Without directly blaming any specific country, the Russian military said the necessary data and capability for the attacks could only have been obtained "from one of the countries that possesses know-how in satellite navigation"—a statement that appeared to be directed at the United States.

It also noted a "strange coincidence" of a U.S. military intelligence plane flying over the Mediterranean near the two Russian bases at the moment of the attack.

Russian lawmakers skipped decorum, bluntly accusing the U.S. of sponsoring the drone attack. "That action wouldn't have been possible without involvement of American structures," said Gennady Zyuganov, head of the Communist Party and a member of the lower house.

Dmitry Sablin, a lawmaker who coordinates parliamentary links with Syria, told the Interfax news agency the attack was even bigger than the Russian military acknowledged, involving 31 drones.

The Pentagon strongly denied any involvement.

"Any suggestion that U.S. or coalition forces played a role in an attack on a Russian base is without any basis in fact and is utterly irresponsible," said Marine Maj. Adrian Rankine-Galloway, a Pentagon spokesman.

The Russian and the U.S. militaries have maintained regular contacts to avoid conflict between their forces in Syria. In recent months, however, the Russian military brass has become increasingly critical of the U.S. role in Syria, accusing it of protecting militants who can carry out future battles against Assad—a claim the U.S. has angrily denied.

The drone attack on the Russian assets in Syria also raised tensions between Russia and Turkey. Moscow and Ankara have backed opposite sides in the conflict, but they struck a deal last year to set up de-escalation zones, which also involved Iran, another Assad backer. The agreement has helped reduce fighting significantly and contributed to warmer ties between Russia and Turkey.

Hundreds arrested as violent protests spread across Tunisia

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP)—Tunisian authorities said Wednesday that 237 people were arrested and dozens of others injured across the country in recent days as violent protests against government-imposed price hikes spread to more cities and regions.

The Interior Ministry said that those arrested took part in looting, thefts and arson. Some blocked roads with blazing tires and targeted police stations, municipal depots, stores and banks.

"These acts were carried out at night and have nothing to do with the ongoing protests," the ministry's spokesman, Khalifa Chibani, told Tunisian news agency TAP.

He said 58 members of the security forces were injured and 57 police vehicles damaged, but didn't say how many protesters were hurt. One protester died Monday.

The latest unrest recalled the protest movement that led to the ouster of authoritarian President Zine El Abidine Ben Ali seven years ago. The 2010-2011 Tunisian revolt sparked uprisings across the Arab world, called the Arab Spring.

Tunisia's economy has struggled ever since. The current protests are being driven by economic considerations related to a new budget law.

The Tunisian government is raising fuel prices and taxes on many products and services to reduce the country's annual deficit. Deficit reduction is among conditions set by the International Monetary Fund, which is providing $2.9 billion in loans.

Trying to calm down protesters' anger, Prime Minister Youssef Chahed made a surprise visit to Tebourba, a town about 30 kilometers (20 miles) from the capital of Tunis, where a 45-year-old protester, Khomsi Yefni, died in unclear circumstances on Monday night.

Chahed went to the town's police station that was set ablaze during protests earlier this week. He was greeted by an angry mob who demanded the dismissal of the local chief official.

After the death of the protester, unrest spread to more regions in the country. Violent protests were now affecting at least two dozen towns including suburbs of the capital, Tunis.

The army had to send reinforcements in many cities to protect public buildings, banks and stores.

On the outskirts of Tunis, clashes and arsons broke out in the towns of Attadhamoun, Intilaka, Zahrouni and Zayatine, which were covered under clouds of smoke, private radio Mosaïque FM reported. Young protesters with faces covered with scarves tried to break into shops, but were pushed back by police.

In Ben Arous, another Tunis' suburb, a video posted on the internet showed looters leaving a supermarket with large amount of goods in their hands.

In the southern town of Kebili, soldiers had to shoot rubber bullets in the air to prevent people from looting a supermarket, according to private radio Shems.

The tensions took a political twist Wednesday when the leader of the Popular Front, a coalition of left-wing parties, Jilani Hammami, called for an early election in the country because, he told radio Mosaïque, "Tunisia is experiencing an exceptional crisis that needs an exceptional solution in the absence of horizons."

Whale protects diver from shark

BRUNSWICK, Maine (AP)—A marine biologist believes a humpback whale shielded her from a 15-foot tiger shark in the South Pacific.

Nan Hauser said she didn't understand the actions of the 25-ton whale that she met face-to-face in the Cook Islands. Then she saw the shark.

She's heard on a video telling the massive mammal, "I love you!"

The encounter took place in October, but Hauser didn't upload the video until Monday. It quickly spread via social media.

Hauser, president of the Center for Cetacean Research and Conservation, tells the Portland Press Herald that whales are "altruistic" and often hide seals from predators, but she has never experienced or read about anything about a whale protecting a human. "If someone told me the story, I wouldn't believe it," she said.

The Brunswick resident said she was oblivious to the shark during the tense, 10-minute encounter. The whale started to nudge her, and appeared to push her with its head. The animal also appeared to shield her with its pectoral fin.

Her research companions turned off an underwater video drone, fearing she was going to be mauled to death.

But Hauser kept her video rolling.

She suffered some bruises and scratches from the encounter, but was otherwise unscathed. She said that after she swam back to her boat, the whale surfaced nearby as if to check on her.

Police: Woman was topless during attempt to rob Uber driver

HARAHAN, La. (AP)—A Louisiana couple is accused of attempting to rob an Uber driver that the woman distracted by being topless. Harahan Police Chief Tim Walker tells news outlets 24-year-old Anthony Kennedy and 22-year-old Rayna Fillios were arrested Saturday. The victim told officers he gave his telephone number to Fillios when she hailed a ride. Fillios called and asked him to come over. He said Fillios was topless when she opened the front door. Authorities say Fillios grabbed his arms, pulled him into her chest, kissed him and bit his tongue to distract him. When Fillios let go, Kennedy brandished a knife and told the victim to hand over his money. The victim refused and Kennedy punched him. The couple was charged with several offenses including armed robbery. It's unclear if they have lawyers.

Principal parodies Mariah Carey to announce school's out

FLORENCE, Ky. (AP)—Sometimes a snow day calls for a song. That's what a Kentucky principal did, posting a musical message for parents to let them know classes were canceled due to icy roads. Union Pointe Academy Principal Chad Caddell posted the video Monday on the school's Facebook page, singing "that school is canceled for today" to the tune of Mariah Carey's "Hero." Dressed in a long coat and fur trapper hat, he begins the parody by saying he's got something on his heart he has to share. Caddell also posted the video to Twitter saying "this is how we do school closings in Kentucky." He told The Associated Press that he created the video with his wife as a way to bring some joy and fun to a snow day.

Swiss police arrest 80-year-old man for masked bank robbery

BERLIN (AP)—Swiss authorities say they have apprehended an 80-year-old man on allegations he robbed a bank near the city of Lucerne. Lucerne canton (state) prosecutors said Tuesday the man, who was arrested the previous day in the Lucerne area, had confessed to the December masked robbery of the bank in Meggen. The suspect's name wasn't released in line with privacy laws and further details weren't immediately available. At the time of the robbery, police released a photo of the suspect showing him wearing a black mask, clutching a blue plastic bag of money as he robbed the bank before he fled on foot. They said it wasn't clear if he was armed, and did not say how much money he got away with.

How music streaming may slow internet use

Q: We use an Amazon Echo Dot device to play streaming music throughout the day, and often have a second unit streaming music on a different floor. Are these devices slowing down my internet service from Comcast?

A: Whether Amazon's streaming music service affects your internet usage depends on what internet speed you buy from Comcast and how fast your Wi-Fi network is.

An Amazon music stream requires 256,000 bits per second of internet capacity, or about a quarter of a megabit. If you run two streams constantly, that's half a megabit. If you have a 10-megabit download speed (the slowest Comcast offers), you would expect that two simultaneous music streams would use up only about one-20th of your internet capacity.

But in many homes, the walls and floors are thick enough to partly block Wi-Fi radio signals, which effectively reduces your internet speed for devices that are a distance from your wireless router. For example, walls made of brick, marble or solid wood can reduce Wi-Fi internet speed by as much as 50 percent. That could reduce your 10-megabit internet speed to 5 megabits, and the two Amazon music streams would be using 10 percent of it.

While using 10 percent of your internet capacity might not seem like a big deal, it could be if you also view streaming video on your TV. Good quality high-definition TV video requires about 5 megabits of internet capacity — more than you may have available if two music streams are running and your Wi-Fi network is also handling downloads for a computer or smartphone.

To find out how much internet capacity you have available, take a laptop computer to each room of your house and run the internet speed test at tinyurl.com/p7zgr.

Do this while running the two Amazon music streams, then with those streams turned off.

Q: I have a 1980s Nintendo Entertainment System (NES) game console that uses a light-sensing "Zapper" gun for shooting games. The game unit still works, but the Zapper doesn't seem to work with a modern LCD TV. Does the Zapper require an old "tube" TV to function?

A: Yes, you need a CRT (cathode ray tube) TV rather than today's LCD (liquid crystal display) models.

The Zapper was a key element in the Nintendo

"Duck Hunt" game that was included with the NES console when it was introduced in 1985. When the Zapper was fired at a CRT, the screen reacted faster than the eye could see.

First it turned completely black, then the parts of the screen displaying ducks flashed white. If the light sensor in the Zapper saw white, you were given credit for a hit. If it saw black, you weren't.

But this technology depended on exact timing. The Zapper's light sensor allowed for the "lag time" — the time between when the trigger was pulled and the CRT screen reacted. When LCD TVs were introduced, they had different lag times than CRT TVs. As a result, the original Zapper pistol no longer worked. ("Duck Hunt" was modified for the Nintendo Wii video game console in 2014, but the new version didn't use the original Zapper pistol.)

'Speed breeding' boosted plants

The world needs faster-maturing food crops for two reasons — to produce more food and to give researchers a more efficient way of studying grain genetics and growing methods.

Fast-growing crops

Researchers have found a pattern of light and temperature that makes grain plants grow faster; it would allow more plantings in one growing season

Two failed ways of speeding crops

During its disastrous Great Leap Forward (1958-62), China's government drove the country toward famine by ordering two measures, hoping to increase crops:

Close cropping was sowing seeds close together — closer than farmers knew the plants could tolerate

Deep plowing was loosening and fertilizing the soil much deeper than usual — as much as 2 meters (6 feet) deep

'Fire and Fury' sales top 29,000 in first weekend

NEW YORK (AP) — Michael Wolff's "Fire and Fury" was the top-selling book last week, NPD BookScan told The Associated Press. And its numbers are likely to grow far higher.

"Fire and Fury" sold 29,000 copies, BookScan announced Wednesday. But Wolff's explosive tell-all about the Trump administration only came out last Friday and

N Korea: Book's popularity foretells Trump's end

SEOUL, South Korea (AP)—North Korea has found good material to attack President Donald Trump: Michael Wolff's bombshell new book, "Fire and Fury."

The North's main Rodong Sinmun newspaper said Thursday the book's sales reflect what it calls "rapidly surging anti-Trump sentiments in the international community."

It says the book's popularity "foretells Trump's political demise."

Last summer, Trump threatened to unleash "fire and fury like the world has never seen," triggering a furious response from the North.

Trump and North Korean leader Kim Jong Un have since traded bombastic threats of war and crude insults against each other.

Trump called Kim a "Rocket Man" on a "suicide mission." Kim called the American president "the mentally deranged U.S. dotard."

BookScan's weekly sales run through Saturday.

"The first couple of days of sales figures aren't giving us the full picture," said Kristen McLean, the NPD Group's book industry analyst. "Because of potential distribution issues related to the early release coupled with high demand, it may take a few weeks to see exactly where this book will land in comparison to other political best-sellers of the last few years."

McLean noted that Hillary Clinton's "What Happened," which came out last September, averaged sales of more than 30,000 hardcover copies per day in its opening week. But that book "was hugely anticipated and very well stocked," she said.

"Fire and Fury" seemed to catch everyone off guard, from the Trump administration to publisher Henry Holt and Co., which has raised an initial announced printing of 150,000 to more than 1 million. Since reports of the book's contents emerged a week ago, retailers have struggled to keep up, with Amazon.com warning of delays of two to four weeks for delivery. BookScan, which tracks about 85 percent of the retail market, only counts an order as a sale once the book has been shipped.

The BookScan numbers also don't include e-books. According to John Sargent, CEO of Holt parent company Macmillan, digital sales already top 250,000 copies, an extraordinary number for a nonfiction release and likely boosted by the scarcity of the hardcover edition. Audio sales exceed 100,000.

Clinton's book, about her stunning presidential election loss in 2016 to Trump, had one of the biggest first weeks in recent history for a nonfiction book. It sold more than 300,000 copies in the combined formats of hardcover, e-book and audio, Simon & Schuster announced at the time. The debut for "Fire and Fury," with its stories of a chaotic White House, is approaching 400,000. "Fire and Fury" will appear at No. 1 on The New York Times' hardcover nonfiction list in the edition that runs on Jan. 21.

"Fire and Fury" was supposed to come out Tuesday but Holt moved up the release in respond to popular demand and to threats of legal action by Trump, who has denounced the book as fiction. An attorney for the president last week sent a cease-and-desist letter to Holt, asking for publication to be withheld. Sargent has issued a company memo defending the decision to publish "Fire and Fury" and a Macmillan attorney on Tuesday said the publisher planned no retraction or apology.

Michael Douglas pre-emptively denies sexual misconduct

NEW YORK (AP)—Michael Douglas has come forward to vigorously deny an allegation of sexual misconduct from three decades ago—before the publication of the claim.

The two-time Oscar winner told Deadline that he anticipated an upcoming report would contain an allegation by a former employee that he acted inappropriately in front of her about 32 years ago.

Douglas decided

to try "to get ahead of" the story by speaking to Deadline, calling it a "complete lie, fabrication." He says his wife, Catherine Zeta-Jones, "has been very supportive."

Douglas says he remembers the former employee who is allegedly making the accusation and calls her "sophisticated intelligent" with a "good sense of humor." He says he's had no contact with her in more than 30 years.

James Franco denies sexual misconduct allegations

NEW YORK (AP)—After allegations of sexual misconduct circulated on social media about James Franco, the actor told late-night host Stephen Colbert that the "the things I heard on Twitter are not accurate."

The allegations against Franco were prompted in part by Franco's best actor in a comedy or musical win Sunday at the Golden Globes for his film "The Disaster Artist." At the ceremony, Franco wore a pin supporting the "Time's Up" initiative for gender equality in Hollywood.

Actress Violet Paley said on Twitter that Franco pushed her head toward his groin in a car, and filmmaker Sarah Tither-Kaplan claimed a $100-a-day contract she signed to perform nudity in a film of Franco's was exploitive. Actress Ally Sheedy also said in a since-deleted tweet that Franco was an example of why she left the movie business.

"I pride myself on taking responsibility for things that I have done," Franco told Colbert. "The things that I heard that were on Twitter are not accurate, but I completely support people coming out and being able to have a voice because they didn't have a voice for so long, so I don't want to shut them down in any way. think that it's a good thing and I support it."

Franco's appearance Tuesday on CBS' "The Late Show With Stephen Colbert" came hours after The New York Times canceled a public event scheduled Wednesday that was intended to feature "The Disaster Artist" director and star and his brother and co-star, Dave Franco, discussing the movie with a Times reporter.

The Times said in a statement that it had canceled the event "given the controversy surrounding recent allegations."

The scrutiny comes at a delicate moment for Franco, a contender for a best-actor Academy Awards nomination. Voting for the Oscar nominations ends Friday.

Franco said he had "no idea" why Sheedy, whom he directed in a 2014 off-Broadway play, was upset. "I had nothing but a great time with her," he said. But in reference to other behavior, he said, "If there's restitution to be made, I will make it."

"I'm here to listen and learn and change my perspective where it's off, and I'm completely willing and want to," he said.

In 2014, Instagram messages showed Franco apparently trying to hit on a 17-year-old Scottish fan. Afterward Franco said he was "embarrassed" and said social media is "tricky." "I used bad judgment and I learned my lesson," the actor said then.

Franco also attended the National Board of Review Awards gala in New York City on Tuesday to present his film's adapted screenplay award. He didn't comment on the allegations at the ceremony. An email seeking comment from his publicist wasn't immediately returned.

Franco is scheduled to appear on NBC's "Late Night With Seth Meyers" on Wednesday.

Washington Post suspends reporter for inappropriate conduct

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Washington Post says it has suspended reporter Joel Achenbach for "inappropriate workplace conduct" involving women at the newspaper. The Post says Achenbach will be suspended for 90 days without pay.

Achenbach has released a statement saying, "I've said and done things that were unprofessional, and I apologize to the women affected by this and acknowledge their courage in speaking out." The newspaper's managers are declining to offer details of the accusations against Achenbach or their investigation into his conduct. Willie Nelson cancels shows after leaving a concert early

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—Country music legend Willie Nelson has canceled shows in Nevada and California after leaving a concert in San Diego after performing one song. A publicist for Nelson says shows scheduled this week in Rohnert Park, California; Las Vegas; and Laughlin, Nevada, have been canceled. The San Diego Union-Tribune reported that Nelson left his show at a San Diego casino on Saturday after the first song, "Whiskey River." Fans told the newspaper that Nelson was coughing and apparently had difficulty breathing. A statement from Ticketmaster said he left the stage early because of an illness. Nelson, 84, keeps up a rigorous touring and recording schedule. His latest album, "Willie Nelson and the Boys: Willie's Stash Vol. 2" featuring his sons Lukas and Micah was released last year.

Paul Haggis resigns as chair of Haiti charity he founded

LOS ANGELES (AP)—"Crash" writer and director Paul Haggis has resigned as chair of the board of the charity he founded, Artists for Peace and Justice. The organization says Wednesday that Haggis' resignation was accepted on Jan. 4, one day before The Associated Press published accounts from three women alleging sexual misconduct by the Oscar-winning filmmaker. The women were inspired to come forward following a civil lawsuit in December accusing Haggis of raping publicist Haleigh Breest in 2013. Haggis has vehemently denied all allegations and is scheduled for a deposition with Breest's lawyers on Jan. 29. In a statement, Artists for Peace and Justice thanked Haggis for his service. He founded the Haiti-focused charity in 2009. The organization says Susan Sarandon and Ben Stiller have been appointed as the board's new co-chairs. An email sent to a publicist for Haggis was not immediately returned.

Single mom puts real effort into socializing with couples

DEAR ABBY: I have an answer for a question from "Excluded in the East" you printed on Sept. 24: "Why do married couples exclude single people?"

As a single mother with three children for 15 years, I made the conscious decision to conduct myself as I always had when I was part of a couple. I hosted backyard parties and holiday dinners and invited my married friends. I initiated invitations for dinner and a movie.

At restaurants, I made sure to pick up my own tab. If a couple insisted on paying for my meal, I insisted on paying the tip and was prepared with cash. Why? Because I was mindful that some men felt uncomfortable about taking money from a single woman.

If I wanted company for the evening, I drove to their house. Sometimes I volunteered to be the designated safe driver. Most important, I never complained about my ex or vented about the difficulties of coping as a single mom.

Needless to say, there was no flirting or inappropriate comments. I also avoided lengthy side conversations with one spouse. In short, I worked hard to make sure my married friends enjoyed my company as much as I enjoyed theirs, and it worked!

LAURA IN NEW YORK

DEAR LAURA: I'm glad it worked for you. After I asked for readers' input on the topic, I received many interesting responses. Read on for a sample:

DEAR ABBY: I suspect that married couples are afraid divorce is contagious. It could have something to do with the fact that some married people are no longer happily married and they fear if they include a divorcee, it might trigger a divorce.

HAPPILY UNCOUPLED IN OHIO

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for 10 years. A lot of couples exclude singles because they don't want them to feel like third wheels. I remember when I was single feeling that way in some groups, and it was depressing. Marrieds also have a different mindset than singles, which can lead to awkwardness. It can work, but it has to be the right group.

MARRIED IN THE MIDWEST

DEAR ABBY: We're a gay male married couple. We have many friends—singles and couples, gay and straight—with whom we socialize, usually at restaurants. We often dine with single friends one at a time, because splitting the tab is simply a matter of two credit cards. If we're with another couple, that's two credit cards. Three couples, it's three cards, etc. But with five or seven people at the table, paying for the meal turns into an exercise in high finance.

KEEPING IT SIMPLE IN PALM SPRINGS

DEAR ABBY: I'm in my early 60s and still single. I actually PREFER to be left out of invitations to eat in restaurants, go on trips, etc. with my many coupled friends. It makes me some-

DEAR ABBY: Couples who tend to exclude their single friends, for whatever reason, need to remember that one day they, too, may be single and overlooked. My dear mom was left out a lot after her divorce, and I remember how sad it made her feel.

Your numbers are 4, 10, 18, 22, 29, 37, 46.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Go over contracts, personal documents or anything that you need to update. Having the proper paperwork in order will put your mind at ease and ensure that you are on the right track. Preparation will make a difference. 5 stars

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't get upset over little things. Getting along with the ones you love is far more important than winning a dispute. Keep your conversations positive and your actions thoughtful. Choose love over discord. Base donations on common sense. 3 stars

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be realistic when you assess your current position, as well as your personal and professional goals. Reconsider the way you handle the people who stand between you and success. What you choose to do now will have an impact on your future. 3 stars

Offering what you want to hear instead of the truth can lead to disappointment or loss. Ask questions and do your homework before you make a decision. 3 stars

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may feel like socializing, but don't overspend or drink too much. Emotional deception is likely to set in, making you vulnerable to financial schemes. Reevaluate your current lifestyle, and try to exercise and maintain a healthy diet. 4 stars

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emotional indiscretion and disillusionment will leave you in an awkward position if you believe everything you hear. Don't be gullible or trust someone who may have ulterior motives. Use your intelligence and diplomacy to deal with friction. 2 stars

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take a look inward and consider what you are doing, whom you are associating with and what you have gained or lost due to your actions. A change may be in order if you aren't living up to your expectations. 4 stars

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Smooth talk will get you in the door. Your persuasive charm will help you keep your audience tuned in to whatever you do or say. Don't be shy -- get out and do your thing. The benefits will encourage a bright future. 3 stars

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your emotions will be difficult to control if you feel strongly about a situation. Deal with friends and family openly and honestly to avoid confusion. Giving the wrong impression will be difficult to reverse. 3 stars

Clippers beat Warriors to spoil Durant milestone

OAKLAND, Calif. (A)—Lou Williams scored 27 of his career-high 50 points in the third quarter and the Los Angeles Clippers beat the Golden

State Warriors for the first time in more than three years with a 125-106 win Wednesday that spoiled a milestone night for Kevin Durant.

Williams shot 16 for 27 with a career-best eight 3-pointers and made all 10 of his free throws.

Durant became the 44th player in NBA history to score 20,000 career points, finishing with 40 as the Warriors had their five-game winning streak snapped along with a 12-game unbeaten stretch in the Clippers rivalry.

Durant reached the milestone on a pull-up jumper from the left wing at the 1:41 mark of the second quarter. The Warriors announced his accomplishment on the main scoreboard and Durant received a standing ovation, shaking his head in acknowledgment while still very much in game mode.

By late in the fourth quarter, that crowd was making its way for the exits with the game out of reach.

The NBA Finals MVP returned from a three-game absence due to a strained right calf and scored 25 points in the first half against the Clippers—KD's biggest half of the season and the exact number he needed for 20,000.

Durant, who had a four-point play during the second quarter on the way to 14 points in the period, is at 29 the second-youngest player behind LeBron James and first to reach the 20,000 mark as a member of the Warriors.

He shot 14 for 18, including 6 of 7 from deep, and Zaza Pachulia added 12 points on a night when the Warriors were without their starting backcourt. Stephen Curry resprained his right ankle during the morning shootaround, and Klay Thompson also was out for rest that had been previously scheduled.

Williams also dished out seven assists and rookie Tyrone Wallace added a season-best 22 points off the bench for the Clippers while returning to the Bay Area, where he starred in college at California.

Nick Young started in place of Thompson and had seven points but shot 3 for 11 and missed six of his seven 3-point tries. It was Young's first start with the Warriors. Shaun Livingston played in place of Curry and contributed eight points and four assists.

Bulls 122, Knicks 119

In New York, rookie Lauri Markkanen scored a season-high 33 points, Kris Dunn shook off a nightmarish shooting night to make the tiebreaking basket in the second overtime, and the Chicago Bulls beat the New York Knicks 122-119 on Wednesday night.

Dunn had missed 14 of his first 17 shots before banking in a runner with just under a minute left in the second extra period, and Markkanen finished it off by making two free throws with 6.8 seconds remaining.

Robin Lopez and Denzel Valentine each scored 20 points for the Bulls in their third narrow victory over the Knicks this season.

Rockets 121, Trail Blazers 112

In Houston, Chris Paul scored a season-high 37 points, and Eric Gordon added 30 as the Houston Rockets withstood a late run to get a win over the Portland Trail Blazers.

The Blazers used a big run to cut a 14-point deficit to three with about three minutes left. Houston responded with a 6-2 run, capped by a 3-pointer from Paul, to make it 111-104 about a minute later. Damian Lillard made a layup on the other end, but Paul cut through three defenders to make an off-balance layup to push the lead to 113-106.

The Blazers couldn't get the ball in after a timeout, Houston got the ball back and Clint Capela added two free throws to secure the victory.

Heat 114, Pacers 106

In Indianapolis, Goran Dragic scored 20 points and Wayne Ellington made the decisive 3-pointer with 23.2 seconds left, helping Miami fend off Indiana's late push.

It's the sixth straight win for the Heat. Miami also ended a 10-game road losing streak against the Pacers.

Victor Oladipo scored 26 points and Lance Stephenson provided a late boost of energy that nearly allowed Indiana to erase a 10-point deficit in the final 9:57.

Grizzlies 105, Pelicans 102

In Memphis, Tyreke Evans scored 28 points, including a pair of free throws with 5.9 seconds left that helped the Memphis Grizzlies beat the New Orleans Pelicans.

Marc Gasol finished with 21 points and 10 rebounds for Memphis while JaMychal Green contributed 20 points and 14 rebounds.

Jazz 107, Wizards 104

In Washington, Ricky Rubio scored 21 points, Donovan Mitchell had 16 and the short-handed Utah Jazz completed a season sweep over the Washington Wizards.

Ekpe Udoh scored 16 points and Joe Johnson had 16 off the bench for the Jazz, who had lost 13 of 16 in between meetings with Washington. The Wizards were embarrassed 116-69 in Utah on Dec. 4.

Utah played without two starters, and second-leading scorer Rodney Hood was ejected in the second half.

Timberwolves 104, Thunder 88

In Minneapolis, Jimmy Butler scored 26 points, grabbed seven rebounds and had eight assists for the Minnesota Timberwolves in a win against the Oklahoma City Thunder.

Andrew Wiggins added 19 points, and Karl-Anthony Towns had 18 points and 12 rebounds as Minnesota pulled away in the second half to win

Russell Westbrook had 38 points and 10 rebounds, but Paul George, Carmelo Anthony and the rest of the Thunder had a tough time shooting. Westbrook was 15 of 23 from the field.

Mavericks 115, Hornets 111

In Charlotte, Harrison Barnes had 25 points and 11 rebounds, Yogi Ferrell made seven 3-pointers and scored 22 points and the Dallas Mavericks fended off fatigue to beat a fresh Charlotte Hornets team.

Dirk Nowitzki added 19 points for the Mavericks, and Dennis Smith Jr. had 15.

The Mavericks were playing their third game in four days, while the Hornets were coming off a four-day layoff.

Atlanta (11-30) has the worst record in the NBA and entered the night tied for the fewest road wins. The Hawks posted their fourth road victory this season

Vikings put faith in Forbath's leg, as Lutz satisfies Saints

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (AP)—Kai

Forbath was planning to move into an apartment in New Orleans the week of the 2016 season opener, when a phone call from the Saints quickly turned his day upside down.

The players were off from practice, so Forbath had no doubt about why he'd been summoned to team headquarters five days before the first game.

Coach Sean Payton delivered the disappointing news that the Saints had decided to sign rookie Wil Lutz and release Forbath to make room.

"Coach Payton said he just had a gut feeling that he had to go with him," Forbath said, "so they gave him a shot."

Saints punter Thomas Morstead, who has been the holder for both of them, recalled Lutz making every kick in his tryout the day before the move was made.

"He came in and just killed his workout," Morstead said, "and if Coach Payton gets a gut feeling on something, he'll trust himself over what anybody thinks."

Forbath had just returned from a weekend out of town to celebrate his birthday, after beating out Connor Barth for the job in training camp.

"It was kind of shocking, but you know it's not the first time something shocking's happened to me in this league," Forbath said. "It's a business, and everything happens for a reason."

Lutz, who spent the 2016 preseason with Baltimore after coming out of college at Georgia State, has performed well enough to match Payton's hunch.

He finished fifth in the NFL in points in 2016 and seventh in his second season. Lutz has missed his share, ranking 13th in the league this season in field goal accuracy (86.1 percent) and 19th as a rookie (82.4), but there he was last weekend knocking a 57-yard kick through the uprights late in the third quarter of the wild-card round playoff game.

"You've got to feel confident, and confidence comes from behavior demonstrated. Then you have to have that routine, and although it seems to focus around one swing, I think it's that mentality that, man, you're going to go out there and friggin' put an arrow through them, you know?" Payton said. "Sometimes that breaks guys, but in his case, it's definitely an asset."

That field goal helped the Saints hold off Carolina's late surge and hang on for a 31-26 victory that sent them to the divisional round to play at Minnesota on Sunday.

That's where the 30-year-old Forbath has been since the middle of last season, when the Vikings cut Blair Walsh and turned to him to stabilize this critical specialty role that can determine whether or not a team reaches the Super Bowl.

Bruce agrees to 3-year, $39M deal with Mets

NEW YORK (AP)—Jay Bruce and his proven bat are headed back to the New York Mets.

The free-agent outfielder is set to return to the Big Apple after agreeing to a three-year, $39 million contract, according to two people familiar with the negotiations. The people spoke on condition of anonymity Wednesday night because the deal is pending a physical and no announcement had been made.

A three-time All-Star, Bruce hit a combined .254 with 36 home runs and 101 RBI for the Mets and Cleveland Indians last season. After falling out of playoff contention, New York traded him to the AL Central champions on Aug. 9 for minor league pitcher Ryder Ryan.

Bruce, who turns 31 on April 3, fills a hole in the outfield and brings back some much-needed power to a Mets team trying to rebound from an injury-ravaged 70-92 season. His return in right field would likely mean Michael Conforto is ticketed for center once he recovers from shoulder surgery.

With slugger Yoenis Cespedes coming off a hamstring injury in left, the Mets plan to have their top three outfielders from last year back intact. They have the potential to form a very productive trio for years to come—if healthy.

Bruce's presence provides some insurance in case Conforto isn't ready at the beginning of the season. Bruce also offers a possible option at first base if touted prospect Dominic Smith struggles again.

The Mets made it clear this winter they were seeking an outfielder who could play first lion, two-year contract it gave to free-agent reliever Anthony Swarzak.

"I'm happy," Mets ace Noah Syndergaard tweeted Wednesday night, with a "wackyBruce" hashtag.

Bruce was obtained by the Mets from Cincinnati for a pair of prospects on Aug. 1, 2016. He slumped badly down the stretch that year until finally going on a tear during the final week of the season to help New York secure a wild card for its second consecutive playoff appearance.

The following offseason, many questioned whether the Texas native who had previously spent his entire professional career with the Reds could handle the New York spotlight. It was expected Bruce would be traded to clear a logjam in the outfield, but he remained with the Mets and flourished for the first four months (.841 OPS) of 2017 while emerging as a respected leader in the locker room during a miserable season for the team.

New York began the year with great expectations that were quickly derailed by long-term injuries to Syndergaard, Cespedes and others. By the summer, general manager Sandy Alderson had traded away several pending free agents—Bruce among them—in an effort to shed payroll and acquire young arms.

After being sent to Cleveland, however, Bruce said he enjoyed his time in New York and was open to coming back. He said his familiarity with the Mets and the city could make a difference in his decision.

Bruce is a .249 career hitter with 277 homers and 838 RBI in 10 big league seasons.

Terms of the agreement were first reported by ESPN.

Marlins host Cubs on March 29 in major league opener

NEW YORK (AP)—The Miami Marlins will host the Chicago Cubs in this year's major league opener on March 29, the earliest start in the sport's history excluding international openers.

The game at Marlins Park is scheduled for 12:40 p.m., a half-hour before the New York Mets start at home against St. Louis and Detroit hosts Pittsburgh in the lone interleague opener.

World Series champion Houston opens at Texas. Every team is scheduled to open on the same day for the first time since 1968, and the season starts on a Thursday for the first time since 2011.

The rest of the NL opening-day schedule has Philadelphia at Atlanta, Washington at Cincinnati, San Francisco at the Los Angeles Dodgers, Milwaukee at San Diego and Colorado at Arizona.

The AL opening-day schedule has Minnesota at Baltimore, the New York Yankees at Toronto, the Los Angeles Angels at Oakland, the Chicago White Sox at Kansas City and Cleveland at Seattle.

In Milwaukee, reliever Boone Logan has finalized a $2.5 million, one-year contract with the Milwaukee Brewers, who also agreed to a minor league deal with right-hander J.J. Hoover.

A 33-year-old side-arming left-hander, Logan went 1-0 with a 4.71 ERA in 38 games for Cleveland last year, striking out 28 in 21 innings. He is 29-23 with a 4.47 ERA and three saves in 619 relief appearances for the Chicago White Sox (2006-08), Atlanta (2009), the New York Yankees (2010-13), Colorado (2014-16) and Cleveland (2017).

Logan has a $1,875,000 salary this year, and the Brewers have a $2,125,000 option for 2019 with a $625,000 buyout.

He can earn an additional $3.2 million annually in performance bonuses, of which $2.2 million are for games and $1 million for innings.

Logan would get $50,000 for 25 games, $100,000 each for 30 and 35, $150,000 apiece for 40, 45 and 50, $200,000 each for 55 and 60, $250,000 apiece for 65 and 70, and $300,000 each for 75 and 80.

In Oakland, slugger Khris Davis and the Oakland Athletics agreed to a $10.5 million, one-year contract, more than doubling his salary after he beat the team in arbitration last winter.

Davis won a $5 million salary during a hearing last February, when the club offered $4.65 million. The agreement announced Wednesday avoided another hearing next month, and Davis' deal is fully guaranteed.

Davis is Oakland's slugging centerpiece. He hit a career-best 43 home runs, connecting on the season's final day to surpass the season high he set the previous year for Oakland.

Halep, Wozniacki lead race to seize Serena's Australian Open crown

MELBOURNE (AP)—Simona Halep and Caroline Wozniacki spearhead the charge to succeed Serena Williams at an Australian Open left wide open by the withdrawal of the defending champion and new mum.

A pregnant Williams sealed her 23rd Grand Slam singles title and seventh Melbourne Park crown a year ago, but last week announced she wouldn't defend her title, saying she was "super close" but not quite ready to compete after giving birth in September.

With the 36-year-old having to wait to equal Margaret Court's all-time record of 24 Grand Slam singles titles, the tournament is there for the taking by a host of players, led by world number one Halep, second-ranked Wozniacki and fourth-ranked Elina Svitolina.

Last year there were two first-time major-winners while Serena was on maternity leave—Jelena Ostapenko at the French Open and Sloane Stephens at the US Open.

But their chances in Melbourne look slim: Stephens hasn't won a match on tour since her Flushing Meadows triumph, and Ostapenko was far from her attacking best in her first-round defeats in Shenzhen and Sydney in the past week.

Wimbledon champion and world number three Garbine Muguruza retired with severe cramps in Brisbane last week, in what could be a further boost to Halep's hopes of a maiden Grand Slam.

The 26-year-old Romanian is full of confidence after lifting the title at Shenzhen in dominant fashion, but will need to overcome her sorry record at Melbourne Park where she has lost in the first round in both of the past two years when seeded in the top four.

Wozniacki is riding high after her resurgence in 2017 when she reached eight finals, with victories in Tokyo in September and at the season-ending Tour Championship.

The Danish former world number one lost in the Auckland Classic final on Sunday to Germany's Julia Goerges, but said she felt great heading to Melbourne as she too looks to make her Slam breakthrough.

CNMI Weightlifting will start the season with the staging of the CNMI Weightlifting 2018-1 set for Feb. 17 at the Latte Built 24-Hour Fitness and Nutrition Center at the back of the Marianas Visitors Authority office in San Jose.

Latte Built owner Derek

Cutting is helping CNMI Weightlifting hold its first of a series of events by allowing the federation to use his facility for next month's competition, which will also served as a qualifier for this year's Micronesian Games in Yap. The one-day tournament is open to athletes 13 years old and up and no awards or medals will be given away.

The weigh-in will start at 10am on the day of the competition, while lifts would begin after 30 minutes.

Latte Built gym members are free to join, while non-members will be charged $1 just to compete.

Registration forms are available at Latte Built or can be obtained by getting in touch with any CNMI Weightlifting board member.

The event is part of CNMI Weightlifting's continued efforts in promoting the medal rich Olympic sport that has produced victories for the Commonwealth in various regional events. The competition will also be held in preparation for Saipan's hosting of the 2021 Pacific Mini Games.

Angel San Nicolas, in last month's Pacific Mini Games in Port Vila, Vanuatu, won a bronze in the men's 94kg division, to prevent a medal shutout for the nine-member CNMI delegation. San Nicolas had a successful lift of 141kg in the clean and jerk to earn Team CNMI its first medal since winning the baseball gold in the 2011 Mini Games in Noumea, New Caledonia.

CNMI Weightlifting had its first Olympic-style weightlifting event in October last year with Ray Santos, Joey Tudela, San Nicolas, Brandy Onopwy, and Josh Mateo participating in the exhibition. They were given three tries within the one-minute time limit in the snatch and clean and jerk.

In the other boys division game, M&M Salas Ol'Aces eased past Saipan Vegas Elite, 64-46, to remain undefeated in five matches.

M&M Salas Ol'Aces led right from the get-go, giving Saipan Vegas Elite no chance to pull off an upset. All the 11 players that suited up for the winning team scored with Coby Santos sleading the way with his 10 markers. Duncan Laxa also had 10 points for Saipan Vegas Elite, which fell to a 1-4 mark to stay at the bottom half of the team standings in the eight-squad field.

Meanwhile, in the women's division, both GSM Lady Ol'Aces and Marianas Variety recorded easy wins.

The GSM Lady Ol'Aces downed IT&E, 51-40, to improve to a 6-0 and remain on top of the team rankings. Marianas Variety, on the other hand, earned a 3-3 mark following a 44-13 demolition of winless Shirley's Coffee Shop (0-6).

Anna Lei Santos powered the Lady Ol'Aces to its sixth win in as many games after firing 13 points. Four of her teammates contributed at least 4 points each for the Lady Ol'Aces' balances offense. In contrast, Jeraldine Castillo carried most of the load for IT&E as she tallied 24 points.

In the Marianas Variety-Shirley's Coffee Shop tiff, the former held the latter to one field goal in the first half en route to its lopsided win.

Jeralyn Castillo made the lone field goal (triple) for the hapless Shirley's in the first half, while five players combined for 20 points for Marianas Variety in that period. With Shirley's still relying on Castillo in the second half, Marianas Variety was still in full control and took back-to-back wins after dropping three straight games.

To get a chance to win free entries, interested individuals must fill out an online form at konqersports.com. Pete Sablan pitched three solid innings in relief, while Walter Macaranas did his share at the plate to help the GSM Masters complete a 19-12 drubbing of the IPI Masters in the Saipan Baseball League's Masters division semis game last Wednesday night at the Francisco "Tan Ko" Palacios Ballfield.

Sablan replaced starter Joe Terlaje at the top of the fourth inning, giving up two runs on three hits while striking out six and allowing one walk. Terlaje tossed the first three innings and surrendered eight runs on 11 hits, retiring two batters while walking two more. Tony Flores closed out for GSM and after allowing Manny Tenorio to score on a wild pitch, the former settled in with a 1-2-3 inning in the seventh. He struck out Ed Santos and Phil Celis, and forced Manny Villagomez to ground out to third to end the game.

Earlier, Macaranas, with GSM down at 5-9 after 2 1/2, slapped a two-RBI double in a five-run third inning to help their team hold on to a one-run lead entering the fourth, 10-9. GSM never relinquished the driver's seat from thereon.

The win propelled GSM to a winner-take-all title match on Monday against the undefeated Boleros, who topped the Papa Bears, 13-3, to clinch the first finals berth. IPI and the Papa Bears will face-off

The 670 Sonics XVI survived Saipan Vegas Extreme's hot shooting from the 3-point area to eke out a 62-61 victory in the boys division game in the 2017 TanHoldings Christmas Basketball Tournament last Wednesday at the Gillette Multipurpose Gymnasium.

The win was the 670 Sonics XVI's second after five matches, while Saipan Vegas Extreme dropped its fifth in as many games.

The 670 Sonics VXI hung on to its precarious lead in the closing seconds of their tiff, using the clock to its advantage after Saipan Vegas Extreme threatened the former following Steve King's triple.

King hit the shot from downtown after the 670 Sonics VXI turned the ball over. After the error and with nine seconds left on the clock, Saipan Vegas Extreme sued for time and when the game resumed, King knocked the basket in that cut the lead to one, three seconds remaining in the match. The 670 Sonics VXI then made a quick inbound and melted the clock, avoiding contact with Saipan Vegas Extreme players, who were ready to give up preemptive fouls, but ran out of time, allowing the former to escape with the win.
